BAND 8.0

Some children spend a long time each day on their smartphones. Why is this? Is this a positive or negative development?

Một số trẻ nhỏ dành nhiều thời gian trong ngày trên điện thoại thông minh. Vì sao lại như vậy? Đây là sự phát triển tích cực hay tiêu cực?

BÀI MẪU

Some juveniles spend a long time each day on their mobile phones. This is because video streaming apps are so engrossing, but this can have negative consequences because they can distract children from family life.

Minors love using mobile devices because streaming services have many entertaining videos. This means they have endless opportunities to enjoy themselves, and they can spend their entire day consuming new shows without thinking. For example, many videos on Netflix are aimed at children, some of which design their title and thumbnails to entice children to click on one more video. As a result, they spend their free time in front of a screen instead of being outside doing physical activities, such as bike riding or playing sports.

Despite them being highly enjoyable for the child, this essay believes they should be viewed negatively because of the impact it has on time with parents and siblings. Being around one's nuclear family teaches children many important things, such as values, manners, and how to treat others. If a child misses these opportunities, they could grow up to have impaired social skills and take their values from Youtubers rather than their mother and father. For instance, one of the most popular personalities on Youtube is Logan Paul, who is well-known for promoting drug use, gambling, and violence.

In conclusion, videos on mobiles may be irresistible to those under 18. However, parents should restrict screen time as much as possible to limit the harmful effects influencers can have on their son's or daughter's upbringing.
